The entries in this document are based on the course description for Jurisprudence in the Thomas Jefferson School of Law Fall 2004, Registration Bullets, as follows:

This course explores the philosophical and theoretical underpinnings of the law. All of the schools of jurisprudential thought are discussed. This discussion includes natural law, positivism, realism, historical jurisprudence, sociological jurisprudence, economic analysis and critical legal studies. The differing approaches are related to legal and case analysis. This course is graded non-anonymously and may satisfy the upper legal writing requirement.
