

Dean Thomas Guernsey Receives Warm Welcome to TJSL at Reception, Panel Discussion

Dean Thomas Guernsey

"It is wonderful to see so many proud alums here," said emcee Dave Beavans '08, as he greeted the guests at the welcoming reception for TJSL's new Dean, Thomas Guernsey.

The setting could not have been more perfect.

It was a beautiful San Diego evening on TJSL's 8th floor terrace overlooking the city at twilight. Faculty, staff and alumni attended the event – along with members of TJSL's Board of Trustees and many notable members of the San Diego legal community, including California Fourth District Appeals Court Justice Patricia Benke, Assistant Superior Court President Judge David Danielsen, Superior Court Judge Browder Willis '83 (TJSL Trustee), Superior Court Judge Robert Longstreth, Federal Magistrate Judge Jan Adler, Superior Court Judge (Ret.) Lillian Lim '77 (Trustee) and very special guest, Brazilian Supreme Federal Court Justice Dias Toffoli.

The event was presented by the TJSL Alumni Association, with help in the planning and organization by the TJSL Alumni Office, and through generous sponsorship. (See Page 2)

"What an opportunity you have in front of you," said Beavans, the Alumni Association Vice-President. He told the guests that TJSL's mission is "to become one of the most respected law schools in the U.S."

Beavans shares that vision with the new dean, who comes to TJSL from Albany Law School, where he served as dean and later a law professor, and has set very high goals for TJSL and its place in the world of legal education.

"We have a great institution here," said Dean Guernsey, as he stepped up to the podium. "There are three great parts. First, the faculty. It compares favorably to any faculty in the country – a first-rate faculty we should be proud of. Second, the student body. We have a history of access to legal education here and we are turning out wonderful practitioners who would not have had a chance to go to law school without TJSL. And third, our alumni. We can't succeed without them. Your support is critical. We look forward to a long and productive relationship. We really look to set the future of legal education here."

“And justice for all...”

Just before the dean’s welcoming reception, the Alumni Association, the LEEP Program and the Center for Solo Practitioners presented an “International Access to Justice Panel” that was part of the evening’s festivities.

The three speakers were Brazilian Supreme Court Justice Dias Toffoli, Federal Magistrate Judge Jan Adler and Ben Aguilar '11, who is with TJSL’s Center for Solo Practitioners.

Justice Toffoli led the audience through a detailed description of the role of Brazil’s Supreme Federal Court in the Brazilian legal system. “The American system has influenced the Brazilian system,” Justice Toffoli said. “There are undeniable similarities.”

However, he noted that while the U.S. has had only one constitution, Brazil has had seven – the latest one ratified in 1988. And during those 25 years, “it has had 79 amendments.”

Justice Toffoli added that the Supreme Federal Court guarantees the supremacy of the constitution in that nation and “respects people’s fundamental rights.” (See Justice Toffoli's Remarks)

Magistrate Judge Jan Adler noted that it is the 50th anniversary of a landmark 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision – Gideon v. Wainwright. Judge Adler explained that the case involved a drifter named Clarence Gideon, who in 1961 was convicted of a crime he didn’t commit because he couldn’t afford a lawyer. Gideon then sent a hand-written letter to the Supreme Court asking that his case be heard. Not only did the court hear the case – but their ruling, in Gideon’s favor, resulted in an affirmation of a citizen’s constitutional right to counsel.

“Had a man in Florida not sat down and written to the Supreme Court, the vast machinery of justice would have gone on undisturbed, but the decision changed the whole course of legal history,” Judge Adler added. “Yet, we have a long way to go to assure access to justice. Many jurisdictions don’t have programs (such as Legal Aid) for adequate representation. Sixty-one million people are eligible for these services, yet only a fraction of people use them.”

He went on to detail the negative effect that sequestration is having on the federal courts – delaying cases for months and months.

“Justice delayed really is justice denied,” said Judge Adler. And quoting a commandment of the legendary Judge Learned Hand, he said: “Thou shalt not ration justice.” (See Judge Adler's Remarks)

Alumnus Ben Aguilar spoke of his experiences working within the justice systems in both Spain and Russia. Both countries guarantee the right to counsel, he says, but “it has not been a smooth transition from the Communist system in Russia. Eighty percent of the people don’t have the resources to obtain counsel.”

In his role as an attorney with TJSL’s Center for Solo Practitioners, Aguilar explained what he and his colleagues are doing to increase access to justice in San Diego – including a series of free clinics held in the community during June and July.

The event was a great prelude to the welcoming reception for Dean Guernsey, who has embraced TJSL’s role in the legal community as a force to bring about more access to justice for the citizens of San Diego who need representation.

The Challenges of International Criminal Justice

The second live webinar version of an MCLE was hosted by the TJSJ Alumni Association on Tuesday, July 16. Lacy J Iodes '08 introduced newly appointed Associate Dean for Academic Affairs Linda Keller as the presenter for "The Challenges of International Justice" MCLE event.

Dean Keller presented on the complexities of international criminal law and gave a brief background of the International Criminal Court (ICC) in The Hague, Netherlands, which covers crimes such as genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity. Dean Keller served as a visiting professor at the International Criminal Court during the 2011-12 academic year and has published on international criminal law and human rights in journals including the American University International Law Review.

According to Dean Keller, international criminal cases can only be heard by the ICC if they are referred by the UN Security Council, by a State Party or if the prosecutor receives pre-trial chamber approval. Jurisdictions and the principle of complementarity also applies when the ICC is determining whether or not they will accept a case.

Another limitation of the ICC, according to Dean Keller, is that the ICC has no arrest powers. That has led to the situation where the ICC issued an arrest warrant for Sudanese President Omar Al-Bashir al-Bashir's for alleged crimes against humanity and genocide committed in Darfur, but has so far not been able to bring him to justice.

Dean Keller's presentation highlighted the Kenya Case Study and the challenges that came along with the investigation. She also discussed how the United States has thus far decided not to join the ICC.

The presentation concluded with questions from the alumni and others in the audience.

"Dean Keller's presentation raised some interesting aspects of international criminal law," said TJSJ alumna Camille Guerra '04. "I took the same class several years ago with Professor Keller and it's interesting that the ICC is still grappling with issues related to prosecution. On its face, it would seem somewhat easy to prosecute for crimes against humanity, but as the presentation pointed out, it can be quite difficult. It was a timely presentation on the state of international current events."

Another alumna in attendance was Rebeca Valenzuela '09, who said, "Professor Keller's first-hand knowledge of the workings of the international criminal court was impressive and interesting."

Alum Martin Kruming, Adjunct Professor Jason Fiske Attend Azerbaijan Conference

Adjunct Professor Jason Fiske

TJSL alumnus and editor of the San Diego Lawyer magazine Martin Kruming '77 and Adjunct Professor and Director of the Graduate Programs at Thomas Jefferson School of Law Jason Fiske '08 attended a prestigious "invite-only" conference in Azerbaijan recently. The conference was the 5th Annual International Conference on E-Government, Innovations in Customs in Gabala, Azerbaijan. There were roughly 125 participants representing 56 nations. A sampling of countries present included: Fiji, Malawi, Uruguay, Latvia, Russia, Vietnam, Germany, Afghanistan and Mongolia.

The small delegation from the United States that traveled to Gabala in May included: Kruming; Fiske; Professor Colleen Graffy, Director of Global Programs for Pepperdine University School of Law in London; Dr. Robert Clarke, Associate Professor of Packaging at Michigan State University; and Lee Wakefield, a student in the counter-terrorism master's program at San Diego State University.

"The 5th Annual International Conference on E-Government, Innovations in Customs in Gabala, Azerbaijan was absolutely fascinating in terms of all the issues surrounding the release of information today," according to Kruming. "Equally as fascinating, though, was getting to know so many officials from such a diverse lineup of countries. We packed so much into our five days in Gabala and Baku. A million thanks to Azerbaijan and the Chairman of the State Customs Committee of Azerbaijan, Professor Aydin Aliyev, for being such gracious hosts."

Fiske views the experience as one that led to some useful networking for TJSL. "The conference built in-roads with officials from around the world that will be the foundation for future co-operation on programs," explained Fiske. "Opportunities abound from online learning to residential exchanges. Thomas Jefferson School of Law has the opportunity to be one of the first law schools from the United States to develop programs with the country in an official capacity. With technological advancements in Azerbaijan, it is an exciting time to connect the world."

The Last Week of the 2013 Nice Program by Professor Susan Tiefenbrun

Dear Faculty, Staff and Students,

It is hard to believe that the Nice Program 2013 is now coming to an end. This is the 22nd year of the Nice Program. Students are busy right now taking final exams in the four courses offered in the program: international human rights, international and comparative drug control laws, international trade and finance and international intellectual property. Each course is worth 2 credits, and all students take 2 courses.

This year we had a dream team of law professors, including Ben Templin, Richard Winchester, Alex Kreit, Susan Tiefenbrun and Justice Richard Goldstone. Students came from 7 different law schools to study in our program. There were 21 students from different countries in Europe studying with our 44 American law students. The students and professors traveled far and wide on three-day weekends to London, Prague, Barcelona, Berlin, Paris, Rome, Florence, San Remo, Russia and many other beautiful cities and countries of Europe.

The food here is unbelievably fresh and delicious. Strawberries and watermelon are too delicious to describe. You simply have to be here to experience this culinary wonder. We all appreciated the great lectures relating to international and comparative law by experts such as Justice Richard Goldstone, Judge Caroline Charpentier, Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere, Dr. Chen Ke and Professor Randy Grossman. Dean Rudy Hasl and Lisa Ferreira joined us for this year's Nice Program, and their participation greatly enhanced the program for all of us. We all became good friends after this fascinating adventure in international law in an international and cosmopolitan setting on the French Riviera. What could be better? Join us next year!
