Thomas Jefferson School of Law Adjunct Professor Randy Berholtz and his team of Intellectual Property Fellows have begun a year-long IP Honors Research Project in furtherance of creating a rubric to aid bio-pharmaceutical companies and patent practitioners in deciding which countries to file for patent protection.

The goal of the honors research project is to provide life science companies and patent practitioners with a comprehensive guide regarding the countries where biopharma patents are filed, the countries where life science companies and patent practitioners should file for patent protection, and the factors that life science companies and patent practitioners should take into consideration when strategizing for international patent protection.

The project will consist of the following: (1) a paper addressing: the background of patents, the questions of where do and where should bio-pharmaceutical companies file patents, the development of a decision tree addressing each country’s rule of law and patentability, and a recommendation of further study in the area; (2) a survey querying practitioners as to their present filing habits and the rationale behind them; (3) a seminar titled “Where to File: A Rubric for Biopharma Practitioners” to be held Friday, April 11, 2014 at Thomas Jefferson School of Law; and (4) a published Law Review article summarizing all stages of the research project and its corresponding analysis.

Professor Berholtz is the Acting General Counsel and Secretary of Innovus Pharmaceuticals, Inc. He formerly served as Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of ACON Laboratories, Inc.; Chief Operating Officer and General Counsel of IngleWood Ventures, a life sciences venture capital fund; and Acting General Counsel and Secretary, Nanogen, Inc., a public genomic products company.

This is the second IP Honors Research Project Professor Berholtz has led at TJSL. The first was in 2009 titled “Improving Patent Adjudication: An Updated and Revised Survey of Practitioners’ Experience and Options”.

This year’s participating IP Fellows include: Vince Davies (2L), Katherine MacFarlane (3L), Derek Midkiff (3L), Sumant Pathak (3L) and Richard Schurman (2L).

Vince Davies holds a B.S. in Biochemistry (University of California, San Diego) and a M.S. in Molecular Biology (San Diego State University). Davies is patent bar eligible and presently works at Nanovega, Inc. as a Legal Intern.

Katherine MacFarlane received her B.S. in Biology, with a minor in Economics, from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Professors Susan Bisom-Rapp and Rebecca Lee present papers at the Eighth Annual Colloquium on Current Scholarship in Labor and Employment Law. This year’s colloquium was held on September 27 – 28 and was hosted at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV) by the William S. Boyd School of Law. UNLV Professors Ruben Garcia and Ann McGinley organized the conference. In 2008, Thomas Jefferson School of Law co-hosted the event in San Diego along with the University of San Diego and California Western Schools of Law.

“The annual colloquium has become the premier national conference for labor and employment law works-in-progress,” said Professor Bisom-Rapp, “drawing labor and employment law professors from around the country.” A highlight of this year’s conference was a dinner hosted at the union hall of the Culinary Workers (Local 226). Accompanying the dinner was a panel, “Labor’s History and Future in Nevada: From the Mines to the Casinos,” featuring speakers who are labor leaders in Las Vegas and including a talk by labor historian Professor Michael Green of the College of Southern Nevada.

Professors Bisom-Rapp and Lee presented their papers at UNLV on September 27. Professor Bisom-Rapp’s paper, “It’s Complicated: Age, Gender, and Lifetime Discrimination against Working Women – the U.S. and the U.K. as Examples,” is co-authored with Professor Malcolm Sargeant, who teaches at Middlesex University Business School in London, UK. The paper tackles a pressing problem facing women in old age – the problem of falling into poverty at the end of their lives. Women in both countries suffer from multiple disadvantages before and during their working lives, resulting in significantly poorer outcomes in old age when compared to men. Older women of color are especially disadvantaged.

To address the causal factors, Bisom-Rapp and Sargeant develop a model of Lifetime Disadvantage, which considers the major factors that on average produce unequal outcomes for working women at the end of their careers. Integral to the model are the legal and policy efforts that lessen or magnify the factors’ lifetime effects. Bisom-Rapp and Sargeant argue that regulatory schemes created on a piecemeal basis are unlikely to vanquish systemic inequality on the scale of gender-based lifetime discrimination. Indeed, recognizing the limitations of statutory and policy tinkering is the first step to developing a whole life approach to women workers that will bring greater economic equality in old age.

Professor Lee's paper, "Reconceptualizing the Judge as a Public Leader," looks at how we understand the role of the judge, and the full range of work that judges engage in and should engage in. The most familiar part of the judge's work is adjudicating and this is understood as mostly solitary work. Although this is true to some extent, she shows that judges also work with others in important ways -- in their chambers, in their courtrooms, and in the courthouse, as well as outside the courthouse. Moreover, judges represent the third branch of government, an essential part of our system of democratic self-governance. In light of all that judges do as part of their work, and their clear place in our system of government, Professor Lee addresses two important questions: does the public view the judge as a leader in larger society?, and do judges view themselves as public leaders? As she points out, the concept or title of leader may not automatically attach to the judicial role because of a judge's duty to adjudicate impartially and fairly, without partisan loyalty and political motivations. But leadership involves more than just politically-oriented activities. As she argues, individuals who help the direct the work of others and demonstrate influence also may be seen as engaging in leadership activity. If we think about how one actually becomes a viable candidate for a judgeship, successful judicial candidates have demonstrated leadership to some degree. Once on the bench, these individuals do not stop their leadership work -- as judges, they instead engage in a different kind of leadership. Judges exercise authority in the most obvious way by deciding cases and writing court opinions. Judges also lead by serving as an employer to their court personnel and in how they operate their chambers and direct the work of their staff. Further, judges lead by representing the judicial branch to the public and to the other branches of government. To provide some qualitative data regarding judges' own perceptions about what they do as judges, Professor Lee's project will include an empirical component involving interviews with sitting federal and state judges. Professor Lee asserts in this work that judicial leadership is a significant but under-recognized aspect of a judge's work, and argues that we ought to reconceptualize the judge as public leader, in terms of how the public views judges as well as how judges themselves view their roles.

TJSL ALUMNI NAMED TO SAN DIEGO METRO’S "40 UNDER 40" LIST

Distinguished TJSL Alumni Puja Sachdev 03’ and Kimberly Simms 08’ made the list this year and accepted their awards at the “San Diego Metro’s 40 Under 40 Awards Luncheon” on September 26, at the Sheraton Hotel and Marina.

Sachdev and Simms join other TJSL Alumni in the “40 Under 40” hall of fame with this recognition. Renee Galente 08’ was named in 2012, and Eric Ganci 08’ and Susan Riggs Tinsky 08’ were named in 2011.

It’s especially exciting to be recognized for my work in the cutting edge legal field of medical marijuana. It’s always a risk to do something new and different, but I love what I do each and every day. I'm also very excited to be expanding my practice to include another evolving legal field - Family Formation Law - working with families using various forms of assisted reproductive technologies to make sure their legal rights are fully protected."
CLEO Council Honors TJSLS as "Diversity Pipeline Architect"

The Council on Legal Education Opportunity (CLEO) Council recognized Thomas Jefferson School of Law as one of its "45 for 45" honorees during CLEO’s 45th anniversary celebration reception at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. on September 26.

This year marks the 45th year of CLEO's helping to bring greater diversity to the legal profession. To showcase this momentous occasion, CLEO titled the theme of the celebration "45 for 45." This refers to the 45 law schools, 45 law firms, corporations, and associations, and 45 individuals who have played a critical role in the financial viability of CLEO since 2000.

During the summers of 2006, 2008 and 2011, TJSLS hosted CLEO Summer Institutes, which together brought about 150 CLEO Scholars to the law school for six weeks of courses taught by TJSLS professors, individualized guidance, networking and other activities to prepare them for the rigors of law school. The purpose of the summer program is to provide traditionally under-represented and disadvantaged groups an opportunity to "jump start" their legal careers. CLEO was founded as a non-profit project of the American Bar Association Fund for Justice and Education to expand opportunities for minority and low-income students to attend law school. Many CLEO Scholars are the first member of their family to graduate from college.

According to the announcement sent to TJSLS Dean Tom Guernsey, the CLEO staff stated: "In honor of our esteemed Council Chairman Emeritus, the late William A. 'Buddy' Blakey, we are recognizing these 135 generous financial supporters as the inaugural group of 'William A. Blakey Diversity Pipeline Architects.' Buddy dedicated his life to ensuring the educational 'pipeline' was readily accessible to all students who exhibited the aptitude, fortitude and passion to successfully pursue a quality education. By supporting CLEO and organizations like it, our 'pipeline architects' are doing their part to help ensure the legacy he worked diligently to establish is carried on."

FROM PATENTS TO PORN: THE #BLURRED LINES BETWEEN INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY #TROLLS AND LEGITIMATE INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ENFORCEMENT

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, 2013 4–6PM
ROOM 229, RECEPTION AT 6-7PM ON 8TH FLOOR

In the patent world, a troll is an entity that obtains patents for inventions it never intends to market, instead lurking in the shadows to zap purported infringers with patent infringement suits.

In the copyright world, so-called "sample trolls" such as Bridgeport Music, are entities that create nothing, but control the music copyrights of artists and exist to find infringing samples or uses to extort payment.

At the heart of any "trolls" business model is not inventing useful inventions or creating great music or art, but litigation of controlled IP.

This forum, featuring four of the most accomplished patent and copyright lawyers in the country, will explore the phenomena of IP trolls, from the world of technological invention to the world of film and music.

From technological inventions under patent law, to pornography and musical works under copyright law, this provocative forum is sure to generate light and heat on a cutting-edge issue bedeviling IP law.
